Close Finish In The Race For Fighting on Verdun Front-French Capture German Positions.

Fronts---Russians Get Set Back.

London, April 24. - Battles of heavy proportions have been in progress in all the war theaters except the Balkans. Successes for the entente allies and the Teutonic allies have varied. Four vessels-an Italian steamer, a French bark and two British steamers-are reported to have been sunk by submarines. All their crews are believed to have been saved.

On the Verdun front, where for two months the Germans and French have been almost continuously in battle, the Germans, according to an estimate of the French war office, up to April 22 had used thirty divisions, or about 600,000 men, in the fighting or in reinforcing units, which suffered heavy losses.

LIGHT'S EFFECTS ON GERMS

While It Kills Some, It Transforms Others Into Creatures of a Different Species.

If sunlight destroys bacteria, it is also the active agent in multiplying their species. Such, at least, is the obvious deduction which science is drawing from a recent experiment of Mme. Victor Henry, and it is one that opens up an entirely new field to the

She had occasion recently to expose some germs of anthrax to the rays from a mercury vapor lamp. As she expected, the treatment proved fatal to most of the subject, but a few of them survived.

The astonishing feature in the case was that the survivors had undergone a radical transformation. They were no longer thin and threadlike. They had become spherical, or nearly so, true cocci, in fact. At the same time, they were radically different from all known spores.

did not return to their original form, and when injected into animals produced an entirely new disease.

Mme, Henry is forced to the conclusion that she has developed an entirely new bacterial family, and reasoning from her experience believes that she has hit upon the means by which such families have multiplied. It is her opinion that after long exposure to sunlight, a germ, if not destroyed, undergoes a radical change in form and nature, thus becoming the root of an entirely new species.

ARE USING ROMAN-WEAPONS

Soldiers of Today Employ Almost a Duplicate of Sword Used by Caesar's Legionaries.

If one of Caesar's legionaries who fell in the "pacification" of Gaul could be waked from his long sleep and placed in the trenches, he would find one or two familiar things, even if he failed to recognize the landscape. The appalling racket, the bursting shells, the spectacle of men struck down by invisible agencies of deaththese would be new and awesome. But iar feeling on his brows, and if he took part in a charge he would show himself a most efficient man with the "trench knife."

For this new weapon is just the old Roman broadsword revived and brought down to date. The blade is a bit shorter than that to which the legionary was accustomed-15 inches instead of 18. But the point and edge are keen, the steel is good, the hilt is plain, and the injunction to "thrust at the face" is as sound as ever. With this accustomed weapon in his grip and a cloak over his arm in lieu of shield, Caius of the Tenth legion would be a nasty warrior to meet on the chalk knolls of Champagne.

To Reform Thermometer.

A sign of progress is a bill introduced by a Pacific coast representative to substitute the Centigrade for the Fahrenheit thermometer in government publications. When Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit nearly 200 years ago devised the scale which bears his name 32 degrees below the freezing point was the lowest temperature he knew, so he called it zero. But his graduation has been displaced in the scientific world almost as completely as his idea of the extreme of cold. Scientists everywhere use the Centigrade scale, and the Fahrenheit is in popular use in English-speaking countries only.

The Centigrade thermometer is graduated in a simple and rational way, the freezing point being marked zero and the boiling point 100. The movement for reform of the thermometer ought to go hand-in-hand with the propaganda for universal adoption of the metric system of weights and measures and for uniform decimal relations of coinage in all nations.-Newark Evening News.

Decorations for Women.

Foreign countries are most prodigal of feminine decorations. There are in all some twenty foreign orders, and it is said that Spain was the first country to honor the gentler sex by including them in orders of chivalry. The Legion of Honor, which has been pinned to not a few feminine breasts in the present war, the Russian Order of St. Catherine and the Austrian Star Cross are a few of the greater orders which can be accorded to women. In no country does the decoration be-stowed on a woman carry any title, as in the case of a masculine knighthood, but in several countries certain female decorations bestow a sort of status equivalent to rank in the army.

HER FATHER'S DEATH

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. Shale, a crook and tool of Pollock, was on the fire escape watching for Langdon. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. Mary's escape after the murder is a mystery. Brandon after the murder is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed

Mind and soul were alike concentrated upon Langdon and upon the slow building of the evidence that was to free her from the charge of having murdered James Pollock.

A tumult of old memories was surging about her, as witness after witness told of the tragedy of a year before: (a tragedy that had so grim a sequel in the present,) and yet there were strange nightmarish blanks in those memories-spaces where fact had to give place to imagination, and during which she had hung in the nullity of uncounted moments, merging like a person under ether to momentary painscared consciousness, only to sink whirling back into oblivion. And it was of these moments of which Mary herself knew only by hearsay that the witnesses were now testifying.

Mary did not realize the subtlety with which Langdon was calling these witnesses. In fact, it was doubtful if any of those in the court-room except perhaps the Prosecutor and the Judge, appreciated the skill with which he brought out each detail in its turn.

In pursuance of his method of bringing out events as they had happened he had already, at a "bar side conference." asked permission to recall his witnesses a second or even a third time. Thus it came as a surprise only to the spectators when Mrs. Page again took her place in the witness-box.

"Mrs. Page, you told us yesterday of w your daughter, struggling with her nken father, was struck by him and fled screaming from the house. Will you tell the court, please, what followed that flight? Did you go after her or remain at home?"

"It was impossible for me to follow as quickly as Mr. Langdon did," she said quietly, glancing toward the "So I stood at the gate waiting, feeling sure that it would only be a very few minutes before he would return with my poor, half-crazed girl. "Did he offer to take you with him?" "Yes, but I felt that I must stay at home in case-in case-they brought her back, or she wandered back of her own accord."

"Did you go into the house after they had left?" Langdon's voice was very gentle now, and Mrs. Page smiled at him, a smile that was far sadder than tears as she said:

"No-I wrapped myself up and sat on the steps. I-I felt nearer to Mary out under the stars."

"That is all, Mrs. Page." But now the District Attorney was on

"How long was it before you got a trace of her?" Langdon's voice was toneless, but his eyes were alight with fire as he pictured to himself that strange night hunt for the slender girl he loved. The occasional shouts of the other searchers; the flash of a lantern; the heavy shadows and vividly white snow; the cold that stung his face and hands and the aching weariness that numbed his muscles. It had mysel' been like a nightmare to him, a dream that set his head to throbbing, and in which the only real thing was the stalwart bulk of MacPherson encouraging him forward-and then-the little shoe! He roused himself with a start, realizing that the Scotchman was answering his question.

"It might hae been fifteen minutesmayhap more, when we coom to her little footprints in the snow. Then-" he paused a moment and his voice softened, "we found her wee slipper in a snow bank. A bit further we found t'other one-and the snow began tae be flecked wi' draps of blood. But I should say it was mair than half an hour before we coom upon the lassie hersel'. lying in a faint like." "She was nee conscious, and her clothes were tairn to pieces and hangin' cast disparagement upon this story in ribands. Such clothes as she had on, puir lassie! Her feeties were cut wi' the ice and the stones, and there a little, took her place before the court was a terrible wound on her forehead and an ill faured queer bruise on one

> "Was your wife alone in the house when you returned?"

"Nae, there was maybe half a dozen men frae the town, who had heard of the lassie and had coom to help the search. They set up a shout when they saw us, and I had one of them fire his revolver to tell the others Miss Page was wi' us."

"Did they show any emotion at the sight of Miss Page's condition?" asked Langdon, and a little shudder shook Mrs. Page, who alone of all those present knew of the tragedy to which that "emotion" had led. MacPherson's voice, too, was grim as he said:

"I wouldna call it 'emotion,' but there was a gude bit of murmurin' against those who had driven so sweet a lassie distractit and sent ber to maybe her death in the snow. The murmurin' grew louder when they saw the hurt and there were cries to know who had done it. When Mr. Langdon told them, the murmurs grew louder and finally one of the lads cried out in a loud voice. unconscious of the crowd in the court- wee drappie wie them at the hotel This town has na room for wifebeaters and drunken brutes-he ought to as briefly as possible, what occurred be hung.

A ripple of laughter swept through the room, instantly hushed at the warning frown of the Judge, and Mac-Pherson, his huge brown hands gripped about the edge of the stand, turn-'ed inquiringly towards Langdon.

"At what hour did you reach the home of Miss Page?"

"I dinna ken the exact hour, but it were aboot daylight, and I cude see quite a ways ahead of me."

"Will you tell us, please, what you saw when you approached the Page house?"

Slowly one great hand clinched itself into a knotted fist, and the muscles of his jaw tightened, and across those who sat between, the gray eyes of the Scotchman and the tear-dimmed eyes of Mrs. Page met in a mute communion of terrible memories. Then, slowly, with a new tone of suppressed excitement lending a thrill to his voice he

Then I heerd another voice sayin', 'Annie, Annie-who is it? Don't let them get me-oh, my God, don't let them get me!" And I saw that Dan Page was hidin' behind her, clingin' to her skirts like a scared bairn. His face were all drawn and twistit like, and his mouth was slobberin', and he kept cryin', 'I was drunk -I was drunk! You tell them, Annie-You tell them!' At that she says like tried—my God, men, I've tried—to keep one speakin' to a child, 'There, there, Dan-you're safe!' And then there 'Come oot, Dan Page-or we'll smoke ye oot like the beast that ye are!' At the memory of it! I've lived in hell 'Oh, what shall I do? What shall I do! They will na talk to me-and hoose! Oh, if Philip were only here!"

"'Oh, Dan,' says the puir lady, 'Dan thot he leapit oop onto the rail and will you do that? Tell them you jumped." didn't mean to hurt Mary or-or me.' MacPherson broke off abruptly, and 'No, no,' he whimpered, 'I can't, I his hand shook as he wiped the drops and pulled him to his feet. 'Be a man,' der that gripped him swept through I cried, and I shookit him. 'Be a man the entire room at the thought of that and get you upstairs.'

"'You'd be safe in the cupola. Dan,' upon the snow to stain it with that says Mrs. Page. 'I'll stay with you— swiftly flowing stream of crimson. and this kind man will go for Philip.' But he kept sayin', 'No, no,' and I could hear the others bangin' at the door and I dared not stay, so I slippit oot the way I came and went off for Mr. Langdon."

Mrs. Page, whose anxiety to be near Mary had kept her from returning to the witness room, shuddered at the memories that MacPherson was conjuring up out of the past. The softness which time has lent the tragedy of that chill winter morning was stripped off, exposing the old horrible wound, and she could feel again those groping fingers, icy cold, clutching at her as she strove to drag Dan Page up stairs towards the cupola.

She could hear his voice, now thick with drink, now athrill with terrible fear-as he pleaded with her to hide him and to save him. She had been mercifully numb with the horror of it then; consumed only with the desire to hold those men at bay long enough for MacPherson to bring help, and it was that desire which gave her the strength to drag the heavy bulk of her husband up the two flights of stairs into the little cupola at the top.

She could feel again the sting of the stepped out on the platform of rough boards and dropped the inert figure of her husband at her feet.

Then with all the eloquence of her great fear she had pleaded with the coats over him and carried him to the mob below to go away. Finally one who seemed to be the ringleader had stepped forward and tell the court, Mr. MacPherson; so will had lied and said, "He is sleeping." They muttered ominously at that and again the ringleader spoke: "We have doctor had Miss Page in his laboratory no quarrel with you, Mrs. Page, but no drunkard who strikes his daughter and drives her insane shall stay in this town-Dan Page has got to go.'

"He will, he will." she promised wild-"I'll take him away today. He didn't mean to hurt us-he didn't know what he was doing- But he'll go away,-oh, I promise that." And again the grim voice answered her:

"He'll go, but WE'LL see him off. Let him stand up like a man and talk At that they all took up the shout God he had long forgotten, to save

How long she talked and urged and wept and pleaded Mrs. Page herself did not remember, but somehow she had held them-still threatening still ominous-till far down the road she saw a small speck that she knew was an approaching sleigh with two figures.

At sight of it she had forgotten everything except an infinite relief, and crying in her joy had sped down stairs. leaving Dan Page still huddled in the windy cupola.

If she hadn't-she shuddered, and caught her breadth in a smothered sob, and for a moment the court-room hung in a haze before her and the voice of MacPherson speaking on the witnessstand receded to a vast distance and seemed to be again the murmuring voices of that angry mob. But she fought back the impending faintness and the rising tears, and as one bracing himself against the impact of some great weight, she straightened her slender shoulders to meet without flinching the story of that morning's tragedy.

"When Mr. Langdon and I drove oop," MacPherson was saying, "the men were still there, and Mr. Langdon stood oop in the sleigh and made a speech to them urging them to go home quietly. "After a minute or so she unlatchit And the crowd began to murmur again. Then Mr. Langdon told them that the drink was like a ragin' beast inside Mr. Page, that he knew nought of what he did; that he probably didn't remember anything-that he really loved his wife and his girl. And while he was talkin' one of the men gave a cry and pointit oop, and there in the cupola stood Dan Page-wild like the daft, clingin' to the rail, and he cried oot. 'What he says is God's truth. I love my wife and girl as much as you men love yours- It's whiskey that hurt them-not me. I've been a slave in away from it-but it gets me. The sight of it-the smell of it-the taste came an awfu' cry from ootside: of it—is ever in my mind. I drink because I must, and drink more to drown that Mrs. Page began to sob and says, for years, and no horsewhipping could punish me-as does the knowledge of this night's work.' Then suddenly he they'll burn oor hoose, they'll burn oor burst out cryin'-sobbin' like a child, while the men stood starin' oop at him. ROAD BUILDING IS DIFFICULT

Experience and Expert Knowledge Are Essential—Federal Government Offers Assistance.

Road building is a scientific problem-not a haphazard job. We believe, however, that if a census were taken tomorrow, 99 per cent of the people of this land would claim that road and edit a newspaper. Only a small percentage get a chance to try their hands on the blue pencil proposition, but a trip over almost any country road will convince one that most of the 99 have had a crack at road building.

Little by little the public in general and the officials charged with the re sponsibility for our highways are learning that road building requires expert knowledge and experience. That ridiculous, antiquated provision for "working out the road tax" which has spoiled more roads than a bonbardment from all the high-calibered guns of the European armies, is gradually disappearing from our statute books. Board of county commissioners and township supervisors are giving the matter thoughtful attention and improvement will undoubtedly be rapid from now on. The federal government is offering every assistance to the forward movement. Objectlesson roads are constructed upon application of township or county authorities to demonstrate proper methods of construction and proper use of roadbuilding materials. The office of public roads and rural engineering of the department of agriculture furnishes the services of an engineer, and the local communities are required to fur- the race who, about 550, moved from nish all the material, labor and supplies. Experimental roads are also constructed to determine the relative merits and values of the various types of road construction, and of the various preparations and materials for use in road construction. In certain instances the office pays only a portion of the cost of these roads and the balance is borne by the county in which the road is located.

It is too bad that we had to wait for the wail of the stalled automobilist to awaken us to the shameful condition of our roads. A Scotch civil engineer was imported as adviser in the matter of building a railway over our great western plains. He investigated very carefully and gravely reported that the project was unfeasible. When pressed for his reason by the astonished promoters of the enterprise, he said: "You cannot build a line of railway over that country because there's no place to run your tunnels.' The "designer" of most of our country roads has been laboring under a similar twisted and contorted vision of his job-but we're on our way.-Iows Homestead.

CONCRETE ROADS GAIN FAVOR

Highways Are Expensive to Build, but Are Proving, Especially in Cali-fornia, Everlasting.

Investigations by the department of agriculture have shown a wonderful increase in the popularity of roads with heavy concrete base. Such roads are expensive to build, but are proving, especially in sections like California, almost everlasting. The best invest ment California has made has been her good roads. There have been some mistakes; there have been disappointments because of the inability to cover all sections, but there have been enough benefits secured from the good roads to amply compensate for all they have cost.

Community Action Needed.

In many places community action in lestroying weeds is necessary, as it may not be profitable for a farmer to clear his side of the road if the other side is allowed to remain a harboring lace for pests.

Democratic Candidate for Alderman Wins "Draw" In Decision of Contest.

Mt. Carmel, Ill., April 24.-At the ity election last Tuesday W. L. Stayton, democrat, and J. T. Shurtleff, republican, tied for alderman in the First ward. The tie was untied by drawing lots at the city council meeting last night. A dozen poker chips were secured. Upon one was written the name of Stayton and upon another Shurtleff's name. Mayor T. they were amply qualified to build a M. Puckett was then blindfolded and drew the chips one at a time until he drew one with a name on it. After drawing six blanks he took the chip bearing the name of Stayton from the hat. The council now stands seven republicans and three democrats.

FACTS ABOUT THE SLOVAKS

People Belonging to West Branch of Slav Family—Mostly Agricul-turists and Woodcutters.

The Slovaks are Slavs. The Magyars are not. The Slovaks are a people belonging to the west branch of the Slav family. They are chiefly located in northwest Hungary and Moravia, but they are also to be found in Lower Austria, Slavonia and Bukowina. About three-fourths of them are Roman Catholics. Their language was a dialectal form of Czech, and Czech was used in all their writing until the end of the eighteenth century, when the Slovak dialect began to be used in writing. The Slovaks are principally agriculturists and woodcutters. They number about 2,500,000. So far as is known, the Slovaks occupied their present territory about the fifth or sixth century, together with land stretching far to the south. When the Magyars conquered the kingdom of Great Moravia in 907, the Slovaks were a part of that country; the Magyars displaced or assimilated the southern Slovaks and have, with brief interruptions, ruled the rest ever since. In 1848-49, when the Magyars rose against Austria, the Slovaks in turn rose against the Magyars, but on the treaty of peace were handed back to them. The Magyars are a Finno-Ugrian or Finno-Turki people, descendants of the Ural region to the Volga, and after a long sojourn on the Russian steppe were driven westward to obtain a permanent footing, before the close of the ninth century, in the basin of the middle Danube.

Fright Not Cowardice.

There is a state of mind which is about half way between educational fear and cowardly fear. It is generally excusable. For instance, the fear of excruciating pain in the dentist's chair. True, this old fear has been of great value in that much of the old, painful ways have been abolished. But so powerful are early impressions and experiences-especially during adolescence-that many middle-aged persons who were tortured by dentists when young become frightened at the thought of again sitting in the chair of agony. Only by a new experience can "Mother, don't let's bring up the this real fright, not real cowardice, be cast out of the mind.

HAVE LAUGH ON SNOBERLY

His Fellow Members of the Club Like-ly to Indulge in Their Merri-ment for Some Time.

Young Snoberly is very anxious to create the impression that he is don" at French. A few evenings ago, at the club, he took a French comic paper, and for half an hour he prefeebly, as if he had been carried away by the fokes, and say, audibly, "Bon, tres bon!"

There were several gentlemen at the adjoining table who had been noticing Snoberly's antics. At last one of them said: "See that Snoberly over there pretending to read that French paper? I am certain that he does not understand French. He is just doing that to impress the people with his knowledge as a linguist."

"I suppose he must understand French," replied one of the party. "I'll bet a bottle of wine that he doesn't, and I'll prove it."
"I'll take the bet."

The gentleman who had made the bet walked quietly over to Snoberly, and said, "Monsieur, quelle heure est-il?"

("What o'clock is it, sir?") Young Snoberly smiled a Parisian smile, and gracefully handed over the paper!--London Tit-Bits.

Leap-Year Advice.

Here is the sage counsel which Miss Lucille Pugh, feminist, suffragist and lawyer-and also quite pretty-is quoted as offering to all bachelor girls, absolutely without fee, for their leap year guidance, says the New York Evening Sun.

"Propose to the man of your choice but look up his rating first.'

Short and to the point. By the recourse to Bradstreet's it is argued that women may avoid unhappiness frequently resulting from penniless mar-Own Lenses quently resulting from penniless marriages. Good!—as far as it goes: But what eminent counselor of the other sex will not stand forth to aid his trembling brethren? Such a one might well advise:

"Accept the woman who proposes to you if you like her, but first look up her rating in the domestic arts."

One prerequisite is as fair as the other. For the woman: Do not marry for money, but love where money is; for the man: Do not marry to provide yourself with a cook, but while marrying you might as well marry someone who can make out of the place you live in a home. Something more than a liberal income is required to produce "comfortable circumstances" for two.

Talk Costs $54, Tip $10.

Spending money is a part of the life of Barney Oldfield, motor speed king. The great racing driver does not hesitate to satiate his desires, whatever they may be. He has been a guest at the Hotel Muehlebach for three days and has been away from his wife and his home in Los Angeles just a week. Sitting in his room at the hotel the great racing driver got into conversation with his wife by long-distance telephone. He talked to her eleven minutes and paid $54.96 for the privilege of the conversation. The odd cent is war tax.

Oldfield is liberal with tips, too. Miss Ann Gaffney, the operator who handled the call for him, will attest to that fact. After the conversation with his wife, the daredevil driver sent a $10 bill to the operator.-Kansas City

Pigeons Learn to Swim.

The swimming of blue pigeons-the familiar domestic birds-is the remarkable sight reported to a Dutch natural history journal. Some months ago one of the doves was thrown into the water in a flight and rescued by human aid, and since then they have become more familiar with the water. Pieces of bread noticed in shallow places evidently tempted them at first. Gaining courage, they soon learned to swim, and just before making his report the observer saw two of them sailing around like gulls a few yards from his house. When they tired of the bath they quietly flew out of the

HAWSERS OF VAST STRENGTH

Monster Steamers Use Steel Ropes Which it Would Seem Could With-stand Any Power.

After laborious attempts to tow the Thessaloniki into port the Greek liner Patris arrived at New York and her captain reported that three heavy steel hawsers had parted during the effort tended to be absorbed in its contents, to save the disabled ship. The lines Every once in a while he would smile that parted were 4½ inch hawsers feebly, as if he had been carried away which means that a strain of 31 tons. or 62,000 pounds, had been exerted be fore the break.

In general towing and lighter ship work a three-inch steel hawser is the usual line used. This consists of six steel wire strands tightly wound on a central hemp which is soaked in oil, giving a certain pliability. This sort of hawser is also used by some of the steamship lines for permanent moorings. The breaking point of the three-inch steel line is about 23 tons. Its cost is 29 cents a foot.

The largest of steel towing lines is the one six inches in circumference, the breaking strain of which is 54 tons, or 108,000 pounds. Because of the weight of this line and the difficulty of handling it the 41/2-inch hawser is the one mostly used for heavy towing. In bulk the biggest hawsers used in an American port were those on the Hamburg-American liners Vaterland and Imperator. For permanent moorings these great liners used 24inch hemp hawsers besides smaller lines of steel wire and hemp.

MADE A QUICK RECOVERY

Elevator Man Fainted When Leg Was Crushed, but Soon Got Back on Job-It Was Cork.

When the doors of the service ele vator at the Alexandria closed unexpectedly just as Joe Brousett was starting the machine it jammed his leg, mashing it fearfully. Brousett fainted. Fortunately the elevator stopped without dragging him.

"Doc" Bassett, superintendent of service, called an ambulance and hurried Brousett to his home. He appeared dazed. A physician was called. Mr. Bassett returned to the hotel and put a new man on the elevator.

Three hours later he entered the elevator and was astounded to see Brousett operating it. For a moment he thought it was a ghost, but Brousett assured him that everything was all right.

"You see, that was a cork leg that got smashed," he said. "The accident brought back so vividly my original accident that I fainted and only came to by the time I reached home. Then I put on my reserve leg and came back to work."-Los Angeles Times.

Grand Duke's Playful Way.

The Grand Duke Nicholas is not a man who talks, but he has a playful way with him at times, according to the story told by Julius West in "Soldiers of the Czar." Some time ago, during an inspection, the grand duke was standing next to the emperor, a few yards away from a group of generals. He ordered General Russky, then in command of the forces in that region, to step forward. The grand duke next ordered a private soldier to come forward and hack off the general's epaulettes. "We can imagine." says Mr. West, "the dismay of the other generals as the soldier obeyed.

"'Now cut mine off,' was the next order. The soldier did so. 'Now put them on his shoulders."

It was the grand duke's playful little way of promoting Russky to the rank of adjutant general, the highest in the Russian army.

New Indigestible Dish.

Did you ever eat a knish? No. Then you have missed a good attack of indigestion and perhaps the undertaker. A knish is something like a dumpling, only infinitely more so. It is made up of dough, chopped potatoes, onions, cheese, kashe, butter, eggs "and other cereals," weighs a ton or less and costs five cents, normally. Since it became a war baby it costs four cents under certain conditions. It is the great piece de resistance on New York's eastside. Every store sells knishs, and the competition is so great that some of the merchants are giving coupons to buyers. A certain number of these coupons entitles the holder to a certificate and a hack to Bellevue with ten knishes.

Gains Four Pounds in Three Hours.

Raymond Tilton, twenty-one years old, performed the unusual feat of gaining four pounds of weight in less than three hours in order to become a soldier in the United States army, reports the Cincinnati Chronicle. Tilton, whose parents live in Richmond. Ky., desired to join the infantry, and he tipped the scale at 123 pounds, being three pounds shy. He was notified that the government is strict in regard to this matter, and was told to return when he acquired the neces-sary avoirdupois. Feared Burial Alive.

To be buried alive was the greatest fear of a doctor who died recently at Kidderminster, England. It was found that he had instructed his trustees that his remains should be cremated five days after his death, but unless he died of some disease which necessiated it, his body should not be inclosed in a coffin during this period, and if so, he desired the trustees to personally ascertain that life was extinct, "my chief dread being lest by accident I may be cremated or otherwise disposed of while I am still alive," and he directed his trustees to carry out his wishes concerning his cremation and burial as contained in a sealed letter given to them respectively in his lifetime.

Goslings Should Have Tender Grass to Eat From Start-Mashes Should Be Dampened Slightly.

Goose eggs may be hatched under geese or hens, putting from four to six under the latter and eight to ten under a goose. They require about 30 days to hatch. Goslings should have tender grass to eat from the first. Give them a mash of bran, cornmeal and any other ground grains that are fed to chickens. Rolled oats, whole or in parts, make best feed for the first few days. All mash should be dampened slightly.

Be sure to not allow any lumps of salt to get in. Give the goslings plenty of exercise and room on account of leg weakness. When two months old give them whole grain. Those intended for table use should be confined in restricted quarters for about two weeks before killing and all the cornmeal or corn moistened they can eat.

Chicago Court Legally Ends the Controversy Over Which Scholars Fought.

BILATERAL CIPHER O. K.

By It Judge Tuthill Proves Bard of Avon Never Wrote His Immortal Works.

Chicago, April 24. - Francis Bacon used the name of William Shakepeare as a disguise and was the author of all the plays attributed to Shakespeare, according to a decision rendered in an injunction suit in the circuit court here by Judge Richard S. Tuthill. An injunction is issued grain mixture as follows: Equal parts on the petition of William N. Selig motion picture manufucturer, to restrain George Fabyan and others from publishing books in support of the Baconian theory was dissolved. Judge Tuthill, in his decision said:

"That William Shakespeare was born Apr. 23, 1564; that he went to London about 1586 or 1587; for a time thereafter, he made his living working for Burbage; that he later became an actor in Burbage's theater and in traveling theatrical companies; that he retired about 1609 or 1610 to live in Stratford-on-Avon, where he engaged in business to the time of his death on Apr. 25, 1616, and that Shakespeare was not an educated person, are allegations which the court finds true.

BACON A NOTED SCHOLAR.

"The court further finds that Francis Bacon was born Jan. 26, 1570; that he was educated not only in English but in French, Latin, Italian, German and had an education equal to or superior to any one of his age; that he was the compiler of a book of 1,560 axioms and phases seliterary people were frowned upon. vor of the reigning powers and literawent to Paris in his early youth and public tremendously interested. spent several years in this atmos-
